NISS COURTESY VISIT: OLOYEDE HARPS ON INTER-AGENCY SECURITY NETWORKING

... Says JAMB Has Provided Equal Opportunities For All Candidates, Takes Stock Of The Administration

The Registrar of the Joint Admissions and Matriculation Board (JAMB), Prof. Is-haq Oloyede, has stressed the need for cordial inter-agency security networking as a way to consolidate the security architecture of the country. The Registrar made this call on Wednesday 3rd, February 2021 when participants of the National Institute for Security Studies (NISS) paid him a courtesy visit. He commended the Commandant of NISS, Alhaji Ayodele Sa'ad Adeleke, for the significant contributions of the institute to national security. He stated that Alhaji Adeleke had carved a niche for himself before moving to NISS. According to him, on mounting the saddle of the Institute, the new Commandant had infused uncommon energy into the running of its affairs to the admiration of all. Prof. Oloyede stressed that the Board strongly identified with the objectives and laudable programmes of the institute as it brings together the cream of Nigerian

“THE BUSINESS OF SECURITY IS A COLLECTIVE RESPONSIBILITY” - NISS COMMANDANT

The Commandant of the National Institute for Security Studies (NISS), Alh. Ayodele Sa'ad Adeleke, has said the business of security is a collective responsibility. The Commandant stated this when he led a delegation of participants of the 34th Advanced Security Management Course 1 of the National Institute for Security Studies (NISS) on a courtesy visit to the Headquarters of the Joint Admissions and Matriculation Board (JAMB) on Wednesday, 3rd February 2021. The course participants are personalities involved in the management of security in the country at the three tiers of government and they are not supposed to be below the rank of a Director, Permanent Secretary, or their equivalent at the state and local government level. The participants, who are undergoing a one-month intensive training course, would be certified accordingly if found worthy in learning and character at the end of the exercise.

The Commandant pointed out that collaboration, networking, and partnership with one another would go a long way in enhancing the security architecture of the country. Alh. Adeleke noted that security managers alone cannot do it all hence the synergy with other stakeholders to make the business of security an easy task for the country. He said, "We believed the business of security is not for us the security managers alone but a collective responsibility."

bureaucrats from varied backgrounds to tap into their perspectives on national security and intelligence management.

He said the theme of the one-month course which was, "Advanced Security Management" was apt, highly commendable and in line with international best practices and contemporary happenings in the country. Prof. Oloyede stressed the need for inter-agency security networking noting that inadequate networking among the agencies breeds mistrust and disaffection.

He said the greatest threat to security lies at the leadership level. He noted that a situation whereby Heads of security agencies quarrel or are at loggerheads instead of working together through networking is counter-productive.

The Registrar said, as a student of Islamic Studies, the purpose of law is security adding that "if there is no need to protect the people, there would be no need for law. The law is the one thing that protects you from being killed anyhow; protects your property from being stolen; prevents me from declaring myself President or Governor of Nigeria; prevents me from taking your child and making him my own and protects someone from maligning your integrity."

Prof. Oloyede told the delegation that JAMB, which was established in 1978, has over the years discharged its statutory responsibilities diligently and efficiently. He stated that the establishment of the Board has provided immense opportunities for brilliant but underprivileged students who otherwise would not have had the benefit of tertiary education. He then proceeded to reel out the proactive steps that his administration had taken towards improving the system.

According to him, on assumption of duty in 2016, he made five cardinal programmes his priorities and focus and which he had never compromised on.

He listed the five-point agenda to include networking, transparency, technology, discipline, and the welfare of staff.

He stated that all these were deployed maximally and that changed the negative narrative about the Board to the positive image it now enjoys in the national discourse.

For instance, he said the Board under his watch publishes the weekly JAMBulletin which documents activities of the Board, including details of contracts awarded as well as details of the contractors, which were widely circulated both in print and electronic format.

The Registrar pointed out that these measures were not only designed to save cost and get value for money expended but also in tandem with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act (FOI).

Prof. Oloyede added that the Board, in a bid to sanitise the admission process and other operational procedures, had developed the Central Admissions Processing System (CAPS), Integrated Brochure and Syllabus System (IBASS), e-ticketing, sanitisation of the conduct of the Unified Tertiary Matriculation Examination (UTME) and frontally confronting examination cabals and cheats through the deployment of appropriate technology, setting up of a Police Unit to help in the fight against examination misconduct and investigation of reported infringements, among other uncommon innovations too numerous to mention.

The highlight of the visit was a guided tour to JAMB professional Testing Centre (PTC) where participants took a demonstration test.

...“The Business Of Security Is A Collective Responsibility” - Commandant NISS

Commandant, NISS, Alh. Ayodele Sa'ad Adeleke and JAMB Registrar, Prof. Is-haq Oloyede.

Continuing, he said, "People have been blaming the government for not doing more to secure lives and property of citizens, but we believe that there must be coordination between the leadership and the followership. If we understand one another, we would be able to enhance the security architecture of the country."

He stated that the NISS leadership considered it appropriate to cascade security management to all levels of government because security had long been seen as the sole prerogative of the Federal Government.

Alh. Adeleke said, "The various security challenges we have always emanate from the grassroots before they escalate to become national emergencies simply because there is no effective security management at the grassroots. It was this scenario that informed the choice of the participants and the desire to spread the art of management of security to all tiers of national life for effective synergy."

"Furthermore, we believe security issues are better solved when they are handled on an informal basis. This is because the results come in faster and in a more rewarding manner."

The NISS helmsman added that the training would foster necessary linkages and collaboration among all tiers of government as well as help to disseminate security information among top echelons of government. This is in addition to giving participants the required knowledge to manage complex security situations in their respective states and organisations.

The Commandant commended Prof. Oloyede for his passion for education
